Introduction

Welcome, Fellow Conspirator from Distant Realms, to The MADDER HAG! Herein

I confess my alignment with Powers Beyond this World (this rat-raft moving rather widdershins to our Grandest Strategy). Now keep all eyes on the prize. —H.

The Madder Hag — Issue 8

The MADDER HAG is designed for use with the basic, expert, (& advanced) editions of the original fantasy adventure game, and is therefore compatible with the vast treasure store of old-school rules such as Old School Essentials, Labyrinth Lord, original A/D&D, and the like.

ISSUE EIGHT is all about the magic-users; it details an updated Magic-User class for the original game, with 72+ new spells (including 24 spells expanding spell levels 1-6, plus 48 spells for higher levels), dueling wands (that facilitate magical duels), hedge mages (as mysterious traders of black market magic), new options for spell acquisition, and other resources. Future issues will serve as companion material to the original 'old school' game, while also revealing lore & resources for the magazine's emerging campaign setting.

Writing & Interior Artwork by Quentin Bauer. All articles & art copyright 2026.

Arcane Strongholds

At 11th level (& given sufficient resources), a magic-user may build a tower and gain 1-6 1st-3rd level apprentices (doing so as a 'tower wizard' without a formal licentia docendi). At 11th level (wizard), 17th level (mage), or 22nd level (high mage), a (Lawful) magic-user may qualify as honorary magister, dean (or headmaster), or chancellor, respectively, at 1 of the university-ruins lying in its associated, alien demi-plane. Though largely collapsed in this common era, the once-great universitas magistrorum et scholarium still lives, but as a whisper network & secret confederation — with its puppet guilds, factions, & agents policing the illicit uses of magic throughout 'the Sink' (or 'middle earth').

Dueling Wands

Given the opportunity, any respectable fledgling or 'first year' upgrades from a dagger to a dueling wand. Finding one, however, may prove challenging.

- Dueling wand: Shoots a lesser magic missile that does 1 point of damage to its target (just enough to interrupt the casting of a spell), but only with a successful attack roll (the missile range is 10 ft. per level of its caster, or 30 ft. minimum, with no range adjustments to the attack roll); also, adds a +1 bonus to its user's saving throws versus magic wands, rods, staves, or spells, etc. (also, see 'Hedge Mages').

Magic-User

REQUIREMENTS: None

PRIME REQUISITE: Intelligence

HIT DICE: 1d4

MAXIMUM LEVEL (OPTIONAL): 14 (36)

ARMOR: None

WEAPONS: Dagger

LANGUAGES: Common

Magical Apprenticeship

As the apprentice to a (on 1d12): 1-3. conjurer or hedge mage, 4. magician or illusionist, 5. enchanter or thaumaturgist ('wonder-worker'), 6. warlock, witch, or theurgist ('god-worker'), 7. sorcerer or artillery mage, 8. necromancer or mage-hunter, 9-10. wizard or guildmaster (from the Magic-Users' Guild), or 11-12. tower wizard, (extra-planar) academy magister, or other (e.g., sorcerer-champion) — and so on — the magic-user learned a bit of knowledge about the mentor's field of expertise, as well as how to puzzle out and use arcane (e.g., magic-user, elf) scrolls (without casting read magic).

The % chance of success for a basic (non-combat) task related to the mentor's field of expertise equals 30, plus 5 per level (regardless of score, there is at least a 1% chance of failure). The maximum chance of success for puzzling out a scroll (without casting read magic) is 90% (with failure possibly resulting in a spell backfiring or reversing its effect — or in some other unexpected result).

Starting Spells

By default (according to the basic & expert editions), a magic-user starts with only one 1st-level spell. Optionally, a magic-user may instead roll for 1 offensive spell & 1 miscellaneous spell (or, with an INT of 16 or higher, 2 miscellaneous spells).

- OFFENSIVE (on 1d6): 1. Charm Person, 2. Gust of Wind, 3. Light (Darkness), 4. Magic Missile, 5. Pyromancy, or 6. Sleep
- MISCELLANEOUS (on 1d10): 1. Detect Magic, 2. Find Companion, 3. Floating Disc, 4. Hold Portal, 5. Protection from Evil, 6. Read (Obscure) Languages, 7. Read Magic, 8. Shield, 9. Unseen Servant, or 10. Ventriloquism

Or, the Referee may package starting spells based on the mentor's portfolio. An apprentice may learn: Magic Missile, Floating Disc, & Shield (from an artillery mage); Pyromancy, Detect Magic, & Read (Obscure) Languages (from a warlock); Charm Person, Find Companion, & Protection from Evil (from a witch); Light (Darkness), Read Magic, & Unseen Servant (from a wizard); or any other logical variation that combines 1 offensive spell & 1-2 miscellaneous spells.

Special: With an odder mentor, an apprentice may learn: Balkan's Clever Counterfeit or another spell from issue 1 (from a magician or illusionist); or a 1st-level clerical spell (from a theurgist); and so on.

Arcane Magic

► Spell casting: A magic-user may prepare any magic spells from his or her spell book. The magic-user adds new spells by way of magical research, or when gaining a level (& studying with a mentor or higher-level MU), and so on. Magic-users must have an INT of 13, 16, or 18 to learn 7th, 8th or 9th level magic spells, respectively — though they may use a magic scroll or magic item which casts such a spell, regardless of the magic-user's INT.

► Magical research: At 1st level (medium), the magic-user may research new magic spells; and, at name level (wizard), may create magic items (usable by a magic-user).

Mages of Power

Mages of power include the All-Mother of Hags, Grand Sorcerer, & Lich Lord, and so on, plus chief warlocks, legendary mages, vampire nobles, witch lords, and other NPCs of notable power & reputation.

Spell Books (& Spell Acquisition)

BY DEFAULT (according to basic & expert editions), a caster's spell book contains a number of spells equal to the amount the caster can use in a single day. Thus, the spell book of a 4th-level magic-user (magician) may contain up to two 1st-level spells and two 2nd-level spells, but no more than this (until the caster gains a level). (Presumably, a caster can replace a spell with a new one, thereby erasing the old spell, but cannot increase the total.)

OPTIONALLY, a caster can add any number of learned or researched spells to his or her spell book. The caster may copy a spell from another caster's spell book (borrowed or stolen, etc.) by way of magical research, as long as the researcher can: read its text; & also qualify to cast the spell attempted. When researching a spell that is copied from another spell book, the researcher halves the normal time & cost (and accepts the same chance of failure).

1ST LEVEL MAGIC SPELLS

Balkan's Clever Counterfeit

Range: special

Duration: 6 turns

The caster changes the surface of a piece of writing or similar item (e.g., playing card, treasure map); while holding the item, the caster can animate the imagery on the item's surface — or replicate an official document as long as the caster has witnessed the true document (or a reasonable facsimile) firsthand. Anyone carefully studying the item is allowed a saving throw versus spells to see through the forgery. For everyone else, the spell lasts for the duration unless a dispel magic is cast on it (or the caster wills it away).

Find Companion

Range: special (see below)

Duration: special (see below)

The caster entreats the cosmos to send a loyal companion or kindred spirit. Within a few days, this companion crosses paths with the caster, as if by fate or coincidence, though clearly drawn by the spell. The companion behaves as a potential retainer — subject to loyalty, morale, payment, and the limitations of the caster's CHA — but adds a +2 adjustment to its initial retainer reaction to the caster's offer of recruitment. The Referee determines the nature of the summoned companion, though the caster may envision meeting someone more extraordinary than a common footpad, sellsword, or torch-bearer. Generally, there is a 1-in-6 chance of meeting an uncommon companion such as an animal, mount, familiar, or demihuman, and an even lesser chance (possibly 1-in-36) of meeting a rare companion such as an enchanted animal or monstrous ally, etc. However, even the most common companion (e.g., veteran) may prove to be extraordinary over time. The spell can be used once a season — but is limited by the caster's maximum number of retainers. If a companion dies, flees, or parts ways, the spell may not be cast again until the next season. A caster who mistreats a summoned companion suffers a -2 penalty to reaction rolls with all future companions — and may even cause the spell to fail outright.

Gust of Wind

Range: special

Duration: 1 round

The caster creates a whorling mass of rushing air — then sends it forth on a path 10 ft. wide and moving 10 ft. per caster level. The air gusts ferociously along its path; and fans large fires (out to 5 ft.), and extinguishes lanterns and other protected flames (with a chance equal to 5% per caster level), as well as candles, torches, and other unprotected flames (automatically) — that are hit by the air. Additionally, the wind hurls back (10-60 ft.) smaller flying creatures, holds motionless human-sized creatures (moving into the wind), and slows larger creatures (by 50%).

The MADDER HAG

Pyromancy

Range: 30' or special (see below)

Duration: 1 turn

The caster commands a small fire (up to the scale of a campfire, or 3 ft. in diameter) to shrink (to the scale of a candle) or grow (to 6 ft. in diameter), or to change color (to red, gold, blue, green, etc.) — but without affecting its actual temperature. The caster may also command the fire to dance or shimmer, or to shape itself into the likeness of an animal, human, or monster, etc. (though crudely and within reason of a fire's chaotic nature). Any target mesmerized by the trickery may save versus spells to see through the magical deception.

The caster may command the flame to travel instantly from its source to his or her hand. Once held, the flame acts as: a torch for the duration (or until dematerialized by the caster); an attack (at melee range); or a missile weapon (if thrown). At melee range, the flame causes 1 point of damage per caster level to its target (doing so automatically). When thrown (as a missile weapon), the flame explodes on its target and ignites any combustible material within a 15-ft. radius (thereafter acting as a normal fire, i.e., causing 1-8 points of damage to any creature within its area of effect). The caster's control of the flame ends once it is used as a weapon.

ANIMATE OBJECTS (FOR CLERICS)

A cleric (likely of Chaos) may know a divine (6th-level) variant of the animate objects spell (see animate objects spell).

Read Languages

Range 0'

Duration: 2 turns (permanent if reversed)

The spell makes an encoded or indecipherable map, text, or written language, etc., intelligible to the caster; its reverse, obscure languages, makes it indecipherable without use of read languages.

Unseen Servant

Range: 30' or special (see below)

Duration: 6 turns (1 hour) per level

The caster conjures a man-sized, mindless, unspeaking servant made of magical 'force.' The servant materializes invisibly, but may be commanded to inhabit a golem of clothing and straw (such as a sacrificial effigy once used in ancient druidic ritual, or a pumpkin-headed scarecrow also known as a 'Servant of Crows'). The servant is limited in its abilities, but capable of: fetching & carrying objects; opening doors & holding chairs; cleaning & folding laundry; mending clothing & other items; and performing other rudimentary tasks — though it cannot fight, suffer injury, nor exert force of more than 20 lbs. Though ostensibly mindless, some servants seem to adopt a semblance of willfulness or even a personality (perhaps as a shadow of their caster). By default, the servant operates within 30 ft. of the caster, but may be assigned an area of operation separate from its creator (if given permission by the area's owner).

2ND LEVEL MAGIC SPELLS

Animate Objects

Range: 60'

Duration: 2-12 turns

The caster commands a number of inanimate, nonmagical objects (that are not carried or worn by another character) to move and act as if alive: carrying items, fighting, lying in wait, serving as sentries, etc. Each animated object obeys the caster, to the best of its ability (which is clumsy), for the duration of the spell, or until dispelled or reduced to 0 hit points — after which time the object becomes inanimate (and possibly damaged & unusable).

The caster can animate 1 smaller-than-human-sized object for every 3 caster levels — or 1 human-sized object for every 6 levels, or 1 larger-than-human-sized object for every 12 levels. Alternatively, the caster can animate 2 vermin-sized objects (such as books, candles, tableware, etc.) for every 3 levels — which may attack in groups of 8 or more. Thus, a 12th-level caster can animate 4 smaller objects, 2 human-sized objects, 1 larger object, or a group of 8 books, dishes, etc., and so on.

The spell can animate objects such as books, brooms (that move by sweeping), furniture, paper figures, puppets, rugs (& tapestries), sculptures (& statues), suits of armor, tableware, etc.; but cannot make brooms of flying (or other magically-flying objects), golems, living statues, or the equivalent, as these items & constructs are created by way of magical research.

ANIMATED OBJECTS

SIZE	DAMAGE	HD
Vermin (½-2')	1d6 (as group)	1 hit point
Smaller (2-3')	1d6	1
Human	2d6	2
Larger (7-12')	2d8	4
DURABLE: +1 HD (human) or +2 HD (larger)

MATERIAL	AC	DURABLE
Cloth, paper	9 [10]	-1 [+1]
Wood	7 [12]	-1 [+1]
Stone, crystal	5 [14]	-2 [+2]
Metal (iron)	3 [16]	-2 [+2]

Based on the object's design, it: bounces, hops, rocks, rolls, scuttles, slides, or slithers, etc., with a movement of 30' (10') — or, for a slower object (such as a rug), 10' (3'); attacks as a mindless automaton (with a morale of 12, and a THACO & saving throws based on its HD); and possibly grapples (as a rug) or shoves (as a wardrobe), etc., without penalty.

A smaller, human-sized, or larger object can carry a load of 500, 1k, or 2k coins (or 50, 100, or 200 lbs.), respectively — or double this (but reducing its movement to 10'). However, it drops 20% of any items it carries. It has immunity to surprise (within range of the spell); and surprises automatically (if initially appearing inanimate, and barring any magical detection). It suffers no effect from charm, sleep, or hold spells, nor from gases or poisons. A cloth or wood object suffers a -2 penalty to its saving throw (plus an extra point of damage per die) versus fire; a stone or metal object suffers no effect from fire.

Melizandra's Minute Mansion

Range: 30'

Duration: 1 turn per level

The caster conjures a pocket dimension that appears as the interior of a fantastical 'treehouse' of the caster's design (but roughly-constructed as if by children) — and accessible only by way of its rope descending 10-30 ft. from its opening in its floor to the caster below. This opening connects the location where the spell is cast to the pocket dimension itself.

The treehouse's interior lives in an entirely separate plane of existence, with all that implies — so that anything 'outside' the treehouse exists in a different reality, and vice versa. While the opening and rope remain visible to anyone on the outside, the rope may be pulled up into the pocket dimension to avoid its detection.

The pocket dimension houses up to 6 (human-sized) people. When the spell ends and the pocket dimension disappears, any inhabitants still within the treehouse's interior fall to the ground.

CXI. Conjuration.

U The gates within are merely subtler than those without. Conjuration (ninefold or other) is a question of invitation—of knowing whom to ask and when not to listen to the answer.

Stinking Cloud

Range: 30'

Duration: 2-5 rounds

The caster evokes a noxious cloud with a radius of 20 ft. — stunning any unfortunate creatures caught within it for the duration (rendering them incapable of acting while they choke in its atmosphere). With a successful saving throw versus spells, a creature may move away from the cloud (but expends a round to do so).

Wizard's Loyal Henchman

Range: special

Duration: 6 turns or special (see below)

The caster conjures a fighter — with a level equal to one-sixth that of the caster (rounded down) — who acts like a loyal retainer (and adds a +1 bonus to its morale). It fights fiercely in defense of the caster and takes commands as any other retainer, but dematerializes if it succumbs to fear, loses a morale check, and so on.

The caster can extend the henchman's duration (of 6 turns, or 1 hour) by paying it gold that is won in the current adventure — with each payment of 100 gp extending its duration by 1 extra turn (to a maximum of 18 turns, or 3 hours). When the henchman finally dematerializes, so does any of its carried treasure (which is lost forever).

Each casting conjures a different fighter (with its own personality, quirks, strengths, weaknesses, and so on).

3RD LEVEL MAGIC SPELLS

Cone of Cold

Range: 60'

Duration: instantaneous

The caster blasts or exhales a cone of cold 60 ft. long and 30 ft. wide at its end, draining heat and causing 1-6 points of damage per caster level (counting any roll of 1 as a 2). A save versus spells halves the damage.

Demon Summoning

Range: special

Duration: 6 turns

The caster alerts the attention of any nearby demons or other fiends (acting as wandering monsters). If there is a fiend near enough to the caster to approach within 6 turns (at its normal movement rate), it will do so as if compelled. The caster may request a minor or lesser type of fiend — but this does not guarantee the actual creature responding to the spell; if none of these are near enough for summoning, then a random type (or none) may appear. The caster knows intuitively whether or not a summons is noticed and if a fiend is approaching. Summoning a fiend is risky, especially without safeguards in place, as the caster has no control over the summoned creature (by default). Its nature and motives may prove otherworldly and unpredictable; and its temperament capricious, irascible, or outright hostile (and most likely affected by the summoner's alignment, intentions, and of course communication as tested by reaction checks, etc.).

FIENDS & ENCOUNTER TABLES

Demons & similar fiends 'in the wild' inhabit liminal spaces (remote areas where the border between worlds thins). With modified wilderness encounter tables from the 'B/X' edition, a demon (or other fiend) may appear, with a 1-in-12 chance, when 'unusual' or 'flyer' is rolled — or especially in lonely, haunted regions (e.g., desert, ruins, prehistoric, swamp).

SUBTABLE: DEMON

1d12	DEMON TYPE
1-6	Minor (inc. lemure, etc.)
7-11	Lesser (inc. rakshasa, etc.)
12	Greater (small chance of noble)

LEMURE (A MINOR DEMON)

Human-shaped, maggoty blob with a ceaseless & malevolent appetite; enthralled to (and tormented by) more powerful fiends; possibly a fiend's larval form, a human's unregenerate soul, or something else entirely, (depending on the source); (5 ft. tall, & semi-INT).

LEMURES: AC 4 [15], HD 3* (6hp), MV 30' (10'), #AT 1 × bite (1d4), [or 1 × weapon (1d4)], PSI: Nil, THACO 17 [+2], Save F3: D12 W13 P14 B15 S16, ML 6, AL Neutral (LE), XP 50, NA 1d6 (5d6), TT Nil

- A lemure regenerates itself by healing 1 hit point per round; re-spawns after death (unless destroyed by a holy weapon); and suffers no effect from charm, sleep, or hold spells.

Familiar Spirit

Range: 0'

Duration: special

The caster summons a familiar spirit. Upon its initial conjuration, the familiar appears in any type of guise — as (on 1d12): 1. an animal, 2. an animated object, 3-4. a human, 5-6. an elemental or hybrid, 7-8. a monster, 9. an undead creature, or even 10-12. the caster — & thereafter acts as a somewhat faithful servant, obeying the conjurer's commands (including the command to dematerialize). The familiar possesses the knowledge of a 5th-level sage. Its unique fields of study, specializations, etc., do not change with subsequent castings, unless the conjurer permanently dismisses the familiar from servitude.

Upon subsequent castings, and as long as the familiar is not already engaged in a previous task, the conjurer may give the familiar 1 task, which it then obeys to the best of its ability. It may:

- Act as a sage (using the same rules for time and expenses, and taking payment in gold or gems, etc.).
- Discern a few identifying details (e.g., command word, folklore, magic effect, no. of charges) of a magic item; (costing the caster 100 gp, taking 1 turn, & having a 55% chance of success).
- Materialize in order to attack, guard, or steal, etc. (after which the familiar's servitude ends permanently).

If the familiar knows a few spells (as a sage), then the conjurer may memorize these spells as if they are 'learned' & contained in the conjurer's spell book. However, if the conjurer ever dismisses the familiar from servitude (or otherwise loses the familiar), then these spells are lost from the conjurer's repertoire.

Familiars are known to be irritable, mocking, or ornery, at best. For example, a familiar may suddenly demand payment for its services in a specific type of gem, or in something strange (e.g., a petty queen's love letter, a rare cheese, copper pieces left in a moving river, fairy eggs laid by moonlight). Or, if the conjurer requests the familiar take on a specific or more appealing guise (than oozing sludge, etc.), the creature may argue against changing its appearance (consequently demanding a successful Charisma or reaction check).

If the conjurer ever dismisses the familiar permanently (either directly, or indirectly via a command that inadvertently dismisses it from servitude, etc.), then the spell (and thus a new familiar) may not be cast (conjured) again until the next season.

FAMILIAR SPIRITS: AC 9 [12], HD 5* (10hp), MV 120' (40'), #AT 1 × weapon (1d6 or by weapon), PSI: Nil, THACO 15 [+4], Save E5: D10 W11 P11 B13 S12, ML 8, AL Neutral (TN), XP 300, NA 0 (1), TT Nil, (30% chance it knows spells)

- Spells known: At most 1-5 spells (two 1st level, two 2nd level, & one 3rd level, etc.); for more, see 'Sages' (in issue 6).

Tongues

Range: 30'

Duration: 1 turn

The caster wards an area up to 30 ft. in diameter, within which the caster alone may speak and understand any language. The reverse of this spell (also tongues) makes speaking and understanding of any language impossible for all creatures within the warded area.

4TH LEVEL MAGIC SPELLS

Black Tentacles

Range: 30'

Duration: 1 round per level

Ulcerous tentacles burst forth from the earth, floor, mud, water, or other surface underfoot (reaching forth into our realm from their alien dimension), and blindly attack anything in range (which may include structural objects). This abomination (whatever its true form) attacks as a monster with an HD equal to the caster's level (having 7 HD & a THACO of 12 [+7] for a 7th-level caster, and so on) — with a number of attacks (as tentacles) equal to the caster's level (or 13 maximum).

Each tentacle that hits grabs its target, then penalizes the target's 'to hit' rolls by –1 point (so that a victim entangled in 13 tentacles suffers a –13 penalty on its attacks, and so on). On the next round, as the tentacles constrict, the target suffers 1-6 points of damage (per tentacle) for each round the target remains entangled.

For the purpose of bending bars, lifting a gate, or forcing open a door, etc., a tentacle acts with the STR of an ogre (adding a +3 bonus to its 2-in-6 chance). Only a single blow by an edged weapon (that causes at least 6 points of damage) destroys a tentacle (by severing it in an ichor-spewing frenzy). The abomination withdraws entirely when all tentacles have been severed (or when the spell ends), dragging with it any still-entangled corpses.

Ghostly Form

Range: 0' (caster only)

Duration: special

The caster (carrying up to a full encumbrance) 'ghostwalks' (by becoming ethereal, for as long as the caster desires), then material again (at a time of the caster's choosing, thereby ending the spell).

Heat Metal

Range: 30'

Duration: 1 turn

The caster commands metal to heat — causing its wearer discomfort on the first round, 1-4 points of damage on the second round, and 2-8 points on every round thereafter. (Water immersion negates any heating.) The reverse of this spell (chill metal) commands metal to chill — causing its wearer discomfort on the first round, 1 point of damage on the second round, and 1-4 points (with a 3-in-6 chance of frostbite to extremities, requiring amputation) on every round thereafter. Either spell may target 1 human-sized creature for every 6 caster levels.

The MADDER HAG

Speak with Dead

Range: 10'

Duration: 1 turn

The caster speaks with a creature that has been dead for up to 1 week — and, assuming there is no language barrier, asks it up to 5 questions. At 8th, 17th, 22nd, or 27th level, the caster may speak with a creature that has been dead for up to 1 month, 1 year, 1 decade, or 1 century, respectively.

5TH LEVEL MAGIC SPELLS

Airy Water

Range: 0' (caster only)

Duration: 1 turn per level

The caster creates a bubble of breathable atmosphere (with a 10-ft. radius) from any surrounding water (or equivalent, non-magical liquid). The bubble floats or sinks according to the natural buoyancy of the caster, while its breathable air lasts for the spell's entire duration.

Growth of Animals

Range: 120'

Duration: 1 turn per level

The caster causes up to 1 non-magical animal (of normal or giant size) for every 4 caster levels, to double in size, hit dice, damage, & carrying capacity, etc. — without affecting its behavior or disposition.

Wall of Force

Range: 30'

Duration: 1 turn per level

The caster evokes an invisible and nearly-impenetrable force field covering up to 240 sq. ft. The caster shapes the force field's area (into a wall 12 ft. tall by 20 ft. long, as just one example), and orients the field as a wall, bridge, or ceiling, etc. It blocks anything material or magical (including breath weapons, cold, heat, electricity, and even dispel magic), and even hovers in space when losing ground support — though disintegrate dissolves it.

Wizard's Faithful Hound

Range: 30'

Duration: 2 turns

The caster conjures a hound-like creature from another plane of existence. This hound acts as an invisible monster (though visible to its conjurer) and guards an area within range (as designated by the caster). Within this area, it detects and attacks (on command) any intruding creature, including one that is invisible or ethereal, etc., or one damaged only by magic. The hound alerts its conjurer with an unearthly baying, attacks as a monster with 10 HD & a THACO of 11 [+8], and causes 3d6 points of damage. It cannot be harmed by any material or magical means — but does succumb to dispel magic.

6TH LEVEL MAGIC SPELLS

Contingency

Range: 0' (caster only)

Duration: special

The caster casts contingency in addition to a 1st-6th level (self-affecting) spell, such as fly, invisibility, levitate, shield, teleport, or water breathing, etc. The second spell activates only when a specific trigger happens to the caster (e.g., drowning in water, falling from a height) — with the trigger specified at the time of casting. If the caster uses another contingency (& second spell) while still possessing an un-triggered spell, then it replaces the un-triggered spell (effectively wasting it).

Freezing Sphere

Range: 60' or special (see below)

Duration: 1 turn

With a hand gesture, a pocket of air crystallizes into a 'snowball' of absolute zero temperature, to be used as: a cone of cold (as the spell); a missile weapon (if thrown); or a freezing agent (turning water to ice). When using the sphere as a cone of cold, the caster blasts or exhales a cone 60 ft. long and 30 ft. wide at its end — draining heat and causing 1-6 points of damage per caster level (counting any roll of 1-3 as a 3); a save versus spells negates any damage. When throwing the sphere, the caster causes 4-24 points of explosive damage to anything within its 10-ft. blast radius (leaving in its aftermath a brief atmosphere of chilly wind & drifting snow); a save versus spells halves any damage.

When using the sphere as a freezing agent, the caster turns a surface of water (up to a diameter of 60 ft.) to ice, making it thick enough (roughly ½ ft. thick) for a human to walk across. Once used as a weapon (or exhausting its natural duration), the freezing sphere sublimates back to air.

Glass-Wall

Range: 0'

Duration: 1 turn

The caster renders a surface transparent (like glass) for anyone touching it (and for whom the caster grants permission). The spell affects a surface area up to 9 sq. ft. — with a depth of up to 1 ft. (for metal), or up to 6 ft. (for stone or wood). The spell fails to affect gold or lead surfaces.

Warding Sphere

Range: 30'

Duration: 1 round per level

The caster evokes a nearly-impenetrable, spherical force field with breathable atmosphere and a diameter equal to 1 ft. per caster level — capable of shielding or containing any creature small enough to fit inside its volume. Any creature targeted for containment that fails its saving throw versus spells becomes trapped for the duration — though disintegrate, dispel magic, or other magical means (e.g., rod of cancellation, wand of negation) may crack open its shell. Creatures may clumsily roll the sphere at half-speed (based on the movement of the slowest creature), but with little control over its steering, etc.

7TH LEVEL MAGIC SPELLS

Banishment

Range: 30'

Duration: permanent

The caster commands all creatures associated with the lower planes (such as demons, etc.), that are within range, to descend to these regions — affecting up to a total hit dice worth of creatures equaling 5 plus the caster's level. For banishment to work on a given creature, the caster must know exactly the type of creature being targeted, as well as its true name, if it possesses one (as with a greater power). Once banished, a creature exiled to the lower planes cannot return to the caster's plane of existence — barring some special conjuration or other means of access.

TRUE NAMES

A true name is the secret name of a living thing — given to it at the beginning of Creation — that transcends any of its more commonly known names. Consequently, any true name lies hidden in a faraway place, forbidden tome, or ancient memory.

CXIV. Enchantment.

Ū You are not who you think you are—writes Wizard-Lady Vaelen in her recondite Of Root & Flame—Let us fix that.

Charm Plants

Range: 30'

Duration: permanent

The caster communicates with and charms any plants or plant-like creatures, within range, for up to 1 turn. Once charmed, a plant follows the caster's commands — if the plant has the (natural or special) ability to do so. An 'intelligent' plant makes a saving throw versus spells (with a -4 penalty) to avoid the charm.

Counter Spell

Range: 0'

Duration: 6 turns

The caster wards 1 individual with an aura of magical deflection. Any other spell cast upon the warded individual bounces back to its originating caster — who then suffers its full effect, unless the originating caster makes a successful saving throw versus spells. If the saving throw succeeds, the spell bounces back again to the warded individual — who then must also make a saving throw in order to avoid the spell's effect. This dazzling, magical volley continues, back and forth, until someone loses a saving throw (or until the originating spell ends). The counter spell itself ends after deflecting 1 spell (though an individual may be warded with multiple counter spells).

Any caster who suffers the effect of his or her own spell (by way of a counter spell) loses any ability to dematerialize, end, or otherwise control the spell's effect.

The MADDER HAG

Delayed Blast Fire Ball

Range: 240'

Duration: instantaneous (see below)

As with a lesser fire ball, the caster shoots a fiery missile that explodes into a ball of fire with a 20-ft. radius — but causes 2-7 points of damage per caster level (instead of the lesser spell's 1-6 per level) to anyone inside the fiery sphere (victims save versus spells for half damage). While manifesting the fire ball, the caster may delay its detonation for up to 1 round to 1 turn (i.e., 10 seconds to 10 minutes).

Duo-Dimension

Range: 0' (caster only)

Duration: 1 turn per level

The caster flattens into a 2-dimensional, sheet-like shape (with no volume). As a flattened shape, the caster can act, cast spells, and move normally, as well as slip side-ways through the thinnest space (as long as the space is tall or wide enough for the caster's height or width); and also becomes immune to any attack, and invisible to any creature, facing the caster's dimension-less edge. However, when attacked from the front or back, the caster suffers three times the normal damage.

Force Cage

Range: 240'

Duration: level of the caster plus 6 turns

The caster materializes a cage-shaped force field, 20 ft. on a side, around any target within range. Any person or creature trapped within this cage cannot escape its containment — unless it casts disintegrate or dispel magic, uses a rod of cancellation or wand of negation, possesses some form of resistance to magic, or somehow squeezes through the evenly-spaced gaps in its cage walls (which are each $\frac{1}{2}$ ft. $\times$ $\frac{1}{2}$ ft.). Anything trapped within the force cage may attack through its gaps, but only if the attack (breath weapon, spells, etc.) can logically fit through these spaces.

At the time of memorization, the caster may opt to store the spell as a force cube. This alternative spell shrinks the dimensions of the cage (to a cube, 10 ft. on a side), but makes its walls solid and impenetrable — save for the aforementioned spells, devices, or resistance to magic, etc. If the caster materializes the force cube as a personal barrier, it will move with the caster (but with a maximum move of 30 ft. per turn, or 10 ft. per round in combat). The caster may dematerialize the cage or cube at will.

Instant Summons

Range: special (see below)

Duration: instantaneous

The caster magically ‘pairs’ two held objects with a secret command word – with the ‘focus’ object being no heavier than 10 lbs., and the ‘trigger’ object (typically a gem or piece of jewelry) having a value of at least 5,000 gp. Once pairing these items, the caster may summon from anywhere in existence the focus object by holding the trigger object and speaking the command word. If successful, the focus object replaces the trigger object (which disappears entirely). However, the spell fails if another creature possesses the focus object at the time of summoning — though in this failed case the caster gleans details about the object’s possessor and location.

Limited Wish

Range: unlimited

Duration: special

The caster entreats a capricious entity — at best indifferent to our well-being, but likely displeased by its momentary servitude — to reshape reality, though only within certain bounds and for a minor request, such as: duplicating the effect of a lower level spell, increasing the duration or range of a magical effect, offering a helpful clue (or a lead pointing to a treasure), penalizing the attack roll of an enemy, removing a curse, or restoring some of the caster’s hit points. This capricious entity will not (or cannot) effectuate major changes to reality, such as: permanently increasing an ability score, restoring a lost level, or returning the dead to life, etc. — but may look for ways to trip up the caster with an overly literal interpretation (or outright misinterpretation) of the limited wish. A greedy, overreaching, or unreasonable petitioner may push this capriciousness to malevolence (and the Referee may adjudicate such moods with reaction or Charisma checks, as needed).

MCCCXXI. A Capricious Entity.

The Archmage traces the pattern—of what inconstant form I cannot discern: the trisected face, the beetle-fish, the inverted hand, the un-coun-tenanced conjoined twin?—& invokes the Seventh-Power Conjunction.

A glassy prismatica parts the angles of space, & from it emerges the yellow-fingered aberulax, exhaling the scent of the sea at fish-tide.

‘State your wish,’ it intones, wearied of its ceaseless errands. ‘With clarity & caution, for I shall grant precisely what I hear & nothing more—and your weeping afterward will not unmake the contract.’

CXII. Divination.

Θ When we finally realize our terrible power, we know then why they hide truths like shameful crimes.

Mass Invisibility

Range: 240'

Duration: permanent until broken

The caster makes invisible (as the lesser invisibility spell) all persons, creatures, and objects within a 30 ft. × 30 ft. area.

As with invisibility, an invisible person remains so until he or she attacks, casts a spell, or moves beyond the spell's range. Light cast from within range becomes visible (even if its source remains invisible).

Phase Door

Range: 30'

Duration: special (see below)

The caster opens a pathway 5 ft. in diameter and up to 10 ft. deep, leading through a section of wall (made of solid rock or stone, etc.), as with the lesser pass-wall spell. This pathway remains visible and as a conduit for the caster only (to others, the caster 'disappears' or 'reappears' when entering or exiting the portal) — for a number of one-way passings equal to 1 per 2 caster levels. (As an exception to the phase door's exclusivity, a phase spider may see, and use, a caster's phase door!)

Power Word Stun

Range: 120'

Duration: special (see below)

With a terrible word of power, the caster stuns 1 creature within range for a number of rounds based on the creature's current hit points — affecting the creature for 4d4, 2d4, 1d4, or no rounds, if it currently has 1-30 hp, 31-60 hp, 61-90 hp, or 91+ hp, respectively. (The terrible word of power affects the target regardless of its ability to actually hear it.)

Reverse Gravity

Range: 120'

Duration: 1 round (10 seconds)

The caster commands an area within 30 sq. ft. to reverse its gravity, hurling any objects, people, or creatures within the area — that are not securely attached — upwards (i.e., falling upwards) to a maximum height of roughly 30 ft. Those affected suffer falling damage if they strike any barrier, ceiling, or other intervening surface in the path of the 'fall' — and then again when they fall back to earth once the spell's duration ends.

CXVI. Necromancy.

7 Life is the first lie—writes Surgeon & Magister Iskar-eth in his grandiloquent Basalt Codex—We unlearn it here.

Simulacrum

Range: 0'

Duration: permanent (see below)

The caster animates a creature-shaped sculpture made from snow and a sampling of hair (or other body part) from a living being. The sculpture coalesces into a duplicate of the living being — with: an identical appearance; a 30% chance of recalling any solicited memory from the original being's life; and half (or less than half) of the original being's level and hit points. There is a 1-in-6 chance of the newly-created simulacrum acting uncontrollably (then, within 1-6 days, reverting to snow and soon melting away). Otherwise, the creature lacks volition, but instead follows the caster's commands absolutely. It mimics the original being's personality — if at all — subject to the will of its caster. If the simulacrum's hit points drop to zero, then it reverts to snow and soon melts away.

Teleport Without Error

Range: 10'

Duration: instantaneous

The caster (carrying up to a full encumbrance) teleports to any known destination, safely and without error. However, if the caster targets a destination on another plane of existence or world, etc., then the attempt becomes subject to the same chance of success as the lesser teleport spell — with most casters allowed, at best, casual knowledge of the destination, or, in rare cases, general knowledge.

Alternatively, the caster may transport another creature. As with teleport, any unwilling creature may save versus spells to refuse the effect.

Vanish Object

Range: 0'

Duration: permanent (see below)

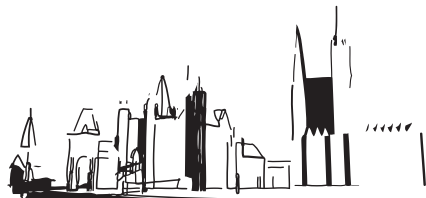

The caster makes an object or structural element (e.g., door), weighing up to 50 lbs. per caster level, teleport to another location (subject to the rules of the teleport spell). Alternatively, or for an even heavier object, the caster 'dematerializes' the object (making it ethereal), & replaces its volume in the material world with stone (dispel magic reverses this effect, replacing the stone with the original object).

Wizard's Sword

Range: 30'

Duration: 1 round per level

The caster evokes a sword capable of damaging both material and astral, ethereal, or otherwise 'out of phase' creatures — including those affected only by magic — and wields this sword capably as a fighter whose level is half that of the caster's. The sword automatically hits on a roll of 19 or 20, and causes 1-8 points of damage per 6 caster levels.

8TH LEVEL MAGIC SPELLS

Antipathy

Range: 240'

Duration: permanent

The caster wards an area (within range of the spell) or an object against creatures of a specified type or (non-Neutral) alignment. Any designated creature will feel repelled by the source of the ward (likely abandoning and shunning it). An affected creature may make a saving throw versus spells to remain in the area or to hold the object — but suffers a –2 penalty to its save versus a warded object specifically. Even with a successful save, the warded effect drains the creature's motivation — penalizing both its attack rolls and saving throws by –2 points — until the creature abandons the ward's source entirely.

The reverse of this spell (sympathy) attracts creatures of a specific type or alignment — causing any affected creature to refuse to leave or to relinquish the source of the enchantment (unless its saving throw succeeds). An affected creature suffers a –2 penalty to its save versus an enchanted object specifically. Any creature making a successful saving throw must succeed again 1-6 turns later with a second save — or else ultimately succumb to the attraction.

BINDING & OTHER SPELLS

A creature restrained by binding suffers a –8 penalty to its saving throw to resist polymorph any thing or trap the soul, etc.

Binding

Range: 10'

Duration: 1 year or special (see below)

The caster restrains (with magical chains) a creature associated with the lower planes (such as a demon, etc.) that is within range. If the caster's level equals (or exceeds) twice the creature's hit dice, then the binding succeeds automatically. Otherwise, the creature makes a saving throw versus spells to avoid the binding. If the caster gains an advantage against the creature — by coaxing it into a magic seal, fatiguing it in combat (by depleting half or more of its hit points), or using its true name — then the creature suffers a –2 penalty (per advantage) to its saving throw. Up to 6 other magic-users, within range, may assist in a binding — with each assistant adding one-sixth of his or her level (rounded down) to the caster's level (for the purpose of the binding spell).

A caster binding a creature may then bargain with it, dismiss it, and so on, as if the creature is captured via magical research. A bound creature remains imprisoned for 1 year, after which time the caster can attempt another binding. (A creature already subject to a binding suffers a –8 penalty to its saving throw.)

The reverse of this spell (unbinding) allows a caster to weaken a binding, but only if the caster's level (with the possible addition of magical assistants) equals (or exceeds) twice the creature's hit dice. With a success, the bound creature attempts a saving throw to escape its binding.

The MADDER HAG

Cast Runes

Range: 0' (see below)

Duration: permanent (until triggered)

The caster weaves — with a snake-like hand gesture — a rune shape onto an object (e.g., book), ceiling, floor, portal, or wall, etc., (or in the air). This shape momentarily slithers and glows with prismatic hues (as if sentient), until slowing and fading to gray as it cools upon the surface or atmosphere. Any creature that touches or reads this rune, or passes by, over, under, or through its surface (or activates it by some other special action designated by the caster), triggers its encoded instruction — which is designated by the caster at the time of the rune's weaving:

DEATH kills creatures — totaling up to 80 hit points — within 60 ft. of the rune.

DESPAIR compels any creatures within 60 ft. of the rune, that fail a saving throw versus spells, to abandon all hope for 3-12 turns. Despairing creatures consequently become inactive or wander away, etc. (even in the heat of combat) — or they submit to any demand made by an opponent (including a demand to surrender).

DISCORD provokes any creatures within 60 ft. of the rune to argue with one another — or possibly even fight each other (50% chance) if they have different alignments — for 2-8 rounds.

FEAR affects (as cause fear) any creatures within 60 ft. of the rune — and penalizes any saving throw versus spells by -4.

MADNESS confuses creatures (as the confusion spell) — totaling up to 120 hit points — within 60 ft. of the rune.

PAIN causes physical suffering to creatures within 60 ft. of the rune — which penalizes a creature's Dexterity by -2 (if relevant) and its attack roll by -4 — for 2-20 turns.

SLEEP causes creatures within 60 ft. of the rune, with less than 9 HD, to succumb to impenetrable slumber for 4-16 turns.

STUNNING makes inactive any creatures within 60 ft. of the rune — totaling up to 160 hit points — for 3-12 rounds. A stunned creature drops whatever it holds.

WARDING causes damage (e.g., electricity, fire, ice) equal to 2 points per caster level (or something of equivalent power)
— or another specified effect
— to any creatures within 10 ft. of the rune.

Clone

Range: 0'

Duration: special (see below)

A clone grows over the course of 2-8 months — in a specialized vat broth — from a slab of excised flesh to a full, mature adult. If properly nurtured in laboratory conditions, the clone eventually duplicates exactly the person or creature that sacrificed its sampling of flesh — with the same memories, level (& XP), abilities, and so on, as those of the original at the time of excision. With faulty incubatory conditions (according to the discretion of the Referee), the clone instead monstrosly transmogrifies or perishes outright.

A duplicate and its progenitor may coexist on the same plane of existence, but only tenuously — with each compelled to eradicate the other, driven unconsciously to end the temporal- spatial-psychic entanglement caused by their shared identity. If this psychic entanglement is not remedied, then one or the other may eventually suffer a complete disintegration of its identity — with a 70%, 20%, or 5% chance of the duplicate, progenitor, or both, respectively, succumbing to madness. There is also a slight 5% chance that both somehow survive this co-existence.

CAST RUNES (LESSER VERSION)

A caster may know the lesser (3rd-level) cast rune of warding — sometimes called explosive rune or glyph of warding in its arcane or divine incarnation, respectively.

CXII.
Transmutation.
δ Change is the true constant.

Incendiary Cloud

Range: 30'

Duration: 5-10 rounds

The caster magically agitates any fire source into a choking ball of thick, obscuring smoke — with a radius of 20 ft. On the third round, the smoke bursts into a sphere of magical fire — causing an amount of damage equal to half the caster's level, per round, to any targets within its radius (for each round, a saving throw versus spells halves the damage).

Irresistible Dance

Range: 0'

Duration: 2-5 rounds

When touched (or, in combat, successfully attacked with an attack roll), the target loses control of its body, and dances or spasms wildly for the duration of the charm — which disables all of its other actions, penalizes its AC by -4, and causes all of its saving throws to fail automatically.

(A caster may know this spell by one of its colloquialisms, such as witch's weller — inspired by folk & monstrous revelries in midsummer marshes under the auspices of Asmodeus or another ruler of Chaos.)

Mass Charm

Range: 120'

Duration: special

The caster charms a number of creatures (as the lesser charm monster spell) that are within a 30 ft. × 30 ft. area — affecting up to a number of hit dice worth of creatures equal to 10 + the caster's level.

Maze

Range: 120'

Duration: special (see below)

Maze traps its target inside a labyrinthine pocket dimension. Escape back to the caster's reality is possible, but the exit is elusive, taking 4-16 rounds for a creature with average intelligence to locate — or double, half, or quarter this time, for a creature with lower, higher, or genius-level INT, respectively, (or 1 round minimum).

Melizandra's Makeshift Mansion

Range: 10'

Duration: 1 hour per level

The caster conjures a pocket dimension — appearing as the interior of a fantastical 'mansion' of the caster's design, and accessible only by way of a 4-by-8-ft. door. This door connects the location where the spell is cast to the pocket dimension itself. The caster controls all access through this doorway — which also vanishes or reappears at the caster's will, or when the caster or the caster's company move through it.

The mansion's interior lives in an entirely separate plane of existence, with all that implies — so that anything 'outside' the mansion exists in a different reality (having no effect on anyone or anything inhabiting its interior), and vice versa. Within the mansion, guests find cozy rooms, clean air, and comfortable temperatures — with enough volume to entertain up to a 100 (human-sized) people. Enchanted servants, fantastically attired, serve all who enter, performing simple, non-violent functions such as: cleaning & mending items, fetching things, folding clothes, lighting fires, or pouring wine, etc. — or even providing tasty (but ultimately illusory) multi-course 'feasts.' Anything conjured within the pocket dimension as part of the mansion disappears if carried or walked through the doorway to the outside plane.

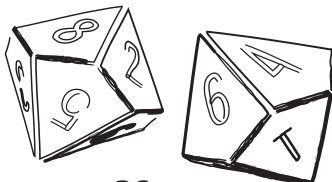

When the spell ends, any outsider guests still within the mansion's interior shift back to their original location.

Mind Blank

Range: 30'

Duration: 1 day

The caster makes 1 target within range immune to all forms of (magical or psionic) divination or scrying — which includes crystal balls, ESP, mind-reading, remote viewing, etc. — as well as to possession and similar powers.

Permanency

Range: special

Duration: permanent

The caster makes permanent a spell effect that targets either a person (or creature), or an object (or area).

When adding a permanent effect — such as detect evil, detect invisible, detect magic, infravision, protection from evil, protection from normal missiles, read languages, or read magic — to a person or creature, the magic-user casts both the desired spell and permanency — but also sacrifices 1 point of Constitution to seal the enchantment. This personal or creature effect can later be undone by dispel magic, but only if the dispel magic is cast by a higher level magic-user. When adding a permanent effect — such as invisibility, wall of ice, wall of fire, or web — to an object or area, the magic-user casts both the desired spell and permanency — but is limited to creating a number of these environmental effects equal to 1 per 3 caster levels, beyond which the oldest permanency effect unbinds itself to make room for the freshest casting. These object or area effects can be dispelled by any magic-user, subject to the normal rules for dispel magic.

Permanency works most assuredly with the spells aforementioned — as well as with tongues or unseen servant (targeting a person), or with force cage, reverse gravity, teleport, or teleport without error (targeting an object or area). Other spells (such as animate objects, levitate, water breathing, and so on) may possibly work with permanency — as adjudicated by the Referee (with unsuccessful combinations eventually breaking apart under the pressure of entropic forces).

Polymorph Any Thing

Range: 60'

Duration: likely permanent (see below)

The caster transforms one thing (living or non-living) into another thing! — though an unwilling target may make a saving throw versus polymorph to resist the effect. The caster may alter the thing's type (animal, mineral, plant, etc.) and size, transforming: a stick into a sword; a creature into a rock; a fungus into a person; a person into a puppet; a weasel into a mantichore; a demon into a sword; and so on and so on. Additionally, polymorph any thing may duplicate flesh to stone, polymorph other, or another (lower-level) spell of similar function — and when doing so penalizes the victim's saving throw by -4. However, any transformed thing is forever readable by detect magic (as well as susceptible to dispel magic).

While most transformations hold permanently — or until dispelled — a transformation that scales a thing by several size categories or otherwise tests the inexact boundaries of the spell (as adjudicated by the Referee) may change back to its original form within a few hours or days (as in the fledgling's fairy tale about the lonesome archmage transforming his beloved onion into a storm giantess).

CXIII. Evocation.

Ξ To evoke is to deny the world its will. The young who dream of fire do not yet understand how powerful denial can be.

Power Word Blind

Range: 120'

Duration: special (see below)

With a terrible word of power, the caster blinds all creatures within a diameter of 30 ft. for a duration based on a creature's current hit points — affecting a creature for either 2-5 turns or 2-5 rounds, if it currently has 1-50 hp or 51-100 hp, respectively. The spell affects up to 100 total hit points worth of creatures — consequently failing to affect any creature having over 100 hp. (The terrible word of power affects a target regardless of its ability to actually hear it.)

Spell Immunity

Range: 0'

Duration: 1 turn per level

The caster grants 1 target a +4 bonus to its saving throws versus magical attacks, and a +8 bonus to its saving throws versus mind-affecting enchantments (such as cause fear, charm person, etc.) for the duration of the spell. Alternatively, the caster grants these bonuses to multiple targets who divide the turns among them.

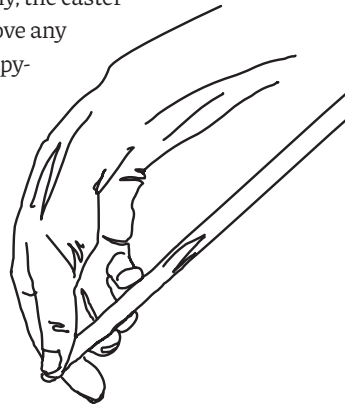

Telekinetic Sphere

Range: 30'

Duration: 1 round per level

The caster evokes a nearly-impenetrable, spherical force field with breathable atmosphere and a diameter equal to 1 ft. per caster level — capable of shielding or containing any creature small enough to fit inside its volume. Any creature targeted for containment that fails its saving throw versus spells becomes trapped for the duration — though disintegrate, dispel magic, or other magical means (e.g., rod of cancellation, wand of negation) may crack open its shell.

Everything within the spherical force field weighs one-sixteenth its normal weight (effectively weightless) — so the sphere may: clumsily roll when motivated by forces from within its shell, or easily bounce, lift, or roll when motivated by forces outside its shell; or float gently in turbulent atmosphere (or water), or fall gently from a height (at a rate of 60 ft. per round) without harming its occupants. (Unless, of course, the spell ends in mid-transport.) Additionally, the caster may telekinetically move any creature or object occupying the sphere that normally weighs up to 5,000 lbs. — as long as the sphere stays within 240 ft. of the caster.

Trap the Soul

Range: 10'

Duration: permanent

The caster imprisons a creature's entire being — capturing its body, spirit, soul, essence, and so on — inside a gem worth 1,000 gp per hit dice of the creature. If the targeted creature successfully resists with a saving throw versus spells, the spell fails and the gem shatters.

Alternatively, the caster tricks the creature into taking a trigger object that — once accepted by the target — automatically imprisons its entire being (without a saving throw) inside the gem. However, if the creature possesses a true name — such as one belonging to a powerful entity from the lower planes, etc. — then the caster must not only know this magical name, but also have the name inscribed on the trigger object in order to effectuate the trap.

This soul gem imprisons the creature permanently, or until the gem is broken — an event that consequently frees the creature and returns it to its original form. In some situations (to be adjudicated by the Referee), the act of freeing a powerful or extra-planar prisoner (be it a creature or other character) compels it to fulfill a compensatory act of service (as a geas).

VALUE OF A SOUL GEM

The value of a soul gem trafficked on the black market (or lower planes, etc.) fluctuates, possibly even approaching a value (in gp) equal to the soul's (class & level) XP!

9TH LEVEL MAGIC SPELLS

Conjure Thoughtform

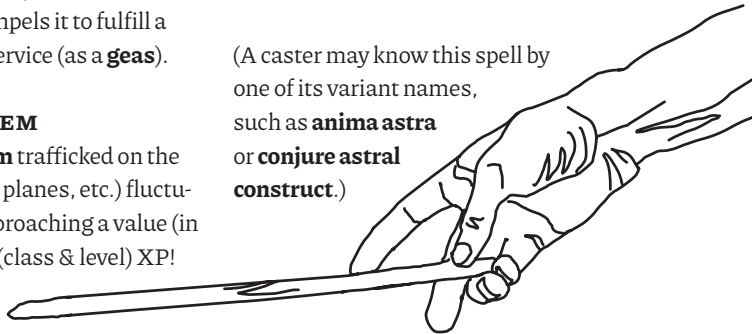

Range: 30'

Duration: 1-3 turns

The caster conjures into material space an astral 'thought-form' — by way of imagining it into physical reality. The caster may 'construct' any creature having a number of hit dice equal to half of the caster's level, or less (rounded down) — but this creature must approximate (in form & function, etc.) a monster that the caster has actually witnessed in real life.

This creature acts exactly as its material counterpart (with all of its magical and other abilities), and at the behest of the caster, but with one caveat: anyone making a successful saving throw versus spells discerns the construct's unreal aura (which appears slightly like the iridescence at the edges of an oil slick), and thereafter halves any damage taken by the creature, and also adds a +4 bonus to any saving throws made against the creature. Based on the Referee's discretion, the caster may conjure up to 4 creatures of the same type instead of 1 larger creature, as long as the total HD do not exceed the limitation of the caster's level.

(A caster may know this spell by one of its variant names, such as anima astra or conjure astral construct.)

Deliverance

Range: special

Duration: special

The caster uses a command word to magically 'pair' a trigger object — worth at least 5,000 gp (such as a gem or piece of jewelry) — with a pre-determined sanctuary. The sanctuary may be any safe and well-known location designated in advance by the caster (possibly a cozy hearth, a stone roadside lantern, a sublime nature retreat, a secreted safe house, etc.), at any distance (above or below ground) in all of existence. Any 1 individual holding the trigger object and speaking the command word teleports instantly to the sanctuary (optionally carrying up to a full encumbrance) — after which the object loses its power.

The reverse of this spell is succor. The caster uses a command word to magically 'pair' a trigger object — such as a coin, candle, stone, etc. — to himself or herself. Any 1 individual holding the trigger object and speaking the command word instantly teleports the caster from anywhere in existence (carrying up to a full encumbrance) to the object's location — after which the object loses its power.

•CXV. Illusion. •

• The truest illusions are not falsehoods (claims In Miruvhan) but 2nd truths seen through someone else's eyes.

Entropic Disjunction

Range: 30'

Duration: permanent

The caster removes all spell effects within range (similar to those affected by dispel magic), and also 'disjoins' any magic items (i.e., turning them into nonmagical items) — excepting, of course, any magic in possession of or touched by the caster.

The spell also affects any gunpowder-era (or more complex) devices within range — which are affected as magic items — rapidly: aging and cracking wood housings; decomposing and molding gunpowder; corroding and disassembling firing mechanisms; and so on (based on the specifics of the technology).

The caster may fail to remove a spell effect by a higher level caster (with the chance of failure equaling 5% for each level higher) — and may also fail to disjoin a magic item (with the chance of failure equaling 50%, or 70% if the magic item was created by a higher level caster). Artifact-level items created by deity-like powers are immune to the spell — though multiple magic-users simultaneously casting the spell may have a 1-in-20 chance of affecting such an item (based on the Referee's adjudication).

Casting the reverse of this spell, entropic abjuration, makes 1 magic item 'higher level' for the purpose of protecting it from being disjoined — regardless of the actual level of the caster — and also makes the item immune to the corroding effect of rust monsters (or of similar sources).

Flame of Forethought

Range: touch

Duration: 4 hours

The caster enables 1 target to see into the immediate future. This target gains immunity to surprise and adds a +2 bonus to all attacks & saving throws. Once per encounter, the target may disregard any reaction check that results in an immediate attack, or any attack or misstep that reduces his or her to 0 hit points — effectively rewriting the calamitous event as if it never happened.

Forbiddance

Range: special (see below)

Duration: 4 hours

The caster wards a manor-sized area up to 40 yd. × 40 yd. (and with an equivalent depth or height). Any ally within this area gains a 20% chance of resisting a spell effect — or adds a +20% bonus to its preexisting spell resistance (up to 60%). Additionally, the caster controls the area's doors (as if each is cast with wizard lock or knock), as well as all magical ingress or egress — effectively blocking gate, teleport, and equivalent spells from transporting anyone into or out of the area (without the caster's permission). The caster may create command words allowing an ally to bypass any of these wards, and also gains a 2-in-6 chance of detecting when someone attempts intrusion by way of a warded door or magical transport. Based on the Referee's discretion, a caster may create other equivalent failsafes within the area that are within reason.

Forlorn Encystment

Range: 0' or special (see below)

Duration: permanent

The caster hurls a creature deep into the earth, entombing it — in a state of suspended animation and hidden from all forms of magic detection — within a cyst of rock for all eternity. The reverse of the spell is forlorn decystment, which awakens and releases the target from its entombment (there is a 10% chance of accidentally unearthing an additional 1-100 imprisoned, potentially powerful, beings long-buried near the target).

Gate

Range: 30'

Duration: special (see below)

The caster opens a portal to another plane of existence, attempting to summon through it a being (divine, infernal, godlike, etc.) inhabiting the other side. The caster must know the summoned entity's name for the spell to take effect, and have some non-trivial purpose for summoning it. If the entity senses propitiators beneath its status, it may send a servitor in its stead, or simply retreat, upon arrival, back to its home. Summoning such a being is risky, especially without safeguards in place, as the caster has no control over a gated being (by default). Its nature and motives may prove otherworldly and unpredictable; and its temperament capricious, irascible, or outright hostile (and most likely affected by the summoner's alignment, intentions, and of course communication as tested by reaction checks, etc.).

Melizandra's Moving Mansion

Range: 10'

Duration: 1 hour per level

The caster conjures a more powerful version of Melizandra's makeshift mansion — appearing as the interior of a fantastical 'mansion' of the caster's design, and accessible only by way of a 4-by-8-ft. door. This door connects the location where the spell is cast to the pocket dimension itself. The caster controls all access through this doorway — which also vanishes or reappears at the caster's will, or when the caster or the caster's company move through it.

As with the lesser spell, the mansion's interior lives in an entirely separate plane of existence, with all that implies — so that anything 'outside' the mansion exists in a different reality (having no effect on anyone or anything inhabiting its interior), and vice versa. Within the mansion, guests find cozy rooms, clean air, and comfortable temperatures — with enough volume to entertain up to a 100 (human-sized) people. Enchanted servants, fantastically attired, serve all who enter, performing simple, non-violent functions such as: cleaning & mending items, fetching things, folding clothes, or lighting fires, or pouring wine, etc. — or even providing tasty (but ultimately illusory) multi-course 'feasts.' Anything conjured within the pocket dimension as part of the mansion disappears if carried or walked through the doorway to the outside plane.

However, Melizandra's moving mansion contains 3 additional doorways — possibly from the kitchen (to the west), the conservatory (to the north), or the upper landing (to the south), and so forth, according to the caster's design — that each lead to a different destination determined by the Referee (e.g., Edwardian England, far-flung continent, Hades, Martian desert, starship-ruin orbiting a dying star). These destinations do not change between castings unless the caster completes a specific quest within that location (as per the quest spell), after which the destination may be changed or replaced by the higher powers governing such realms. Anyone passing through these doors without the caster ends up stranded (or walks into an endless void).

Additionally, once per season, the mansion may grant a limited wish (as the spell, and with the same cautionary note regarding the capricious nature of limited wishes), possibly: cooking a nourishing (non-illusory) meal for the party; providing a few brooms of flying, potions, spell components, or other (lesser) magic items (that may be carried out of the mansion and used in the current adventure); or, arranging a fortuitous meeting with a specialist or other helpful NPC; and so on.

As with Melizandra's makeshift mansion: when the spell ends, any outsider guests still within the mansion's interior shift back to their original location. If the spell ends while a guest inhabits one of the mansion's extra-planar destinations, the traveler remains at that location.

Meteor Swarm

Range: 240'

Duration: instantaneous

The caster assails a target with meteor-like missiles — hurling 4 large meteors (each 2 ft. in diameter) or 8 small meteors (each 1 ft. in diameter) in a straight line. Meteors strike the first target in their trajectory, automatically (with no saving throw allowed), with each large meteor causing 10-40 points of damage, or each small meteor causing 5-20 points of damage. Upon impact, each meteor bursts into fire, with a large-meteor explosion having a 20-ft. blast radius, and a small meteor explosion having a 10-ft. blast radius. Depending on the blast pattern, several of these explosions may overlap — with any indirect targets possibly caught in 1 (or more) explosions, taking damage from each (an indirect target makes a saving throw, for each explosion affecting it, to halve its damage).

Power Word Kill

Range: 60'

Duration: instantaneous

With a terrible word of power, the caster kills 1 creature within range, affecting any target having up to 60 hit points currently. Alternatively, the caster kills up to 120 hit points worth of creatures within a diameter of 20 ft., affecting any target having up to 10 hp currently. (A target succumbs regardless of its ability to actually hear the word of power.)

Phantasmal to Material Force

Range: 240'

Duration: concentration

The caster reshapes reality by making 'real' the illusions of a phantasmal force casting. Illusory creatures become their living counterparts (but free to act, even in hostile opposition to the caster), and illusory objects become subject to the physics of the real world. Creatures cause damage (and even magical damage) as their living counterparts — but metabolized items (such as food & potions, and some poisons, etc.) have no actual, long-lasting effect. If the caster loses concentration, then the material forms become illusory again (and subject to the limitations of the lesser phantasmal force spell).

(Also called alter reality in some circles.)

Shape Change

Range: 0' (caster only)

Duration: 1 turn per level

The caster takes 1 round (10 seconds) to transform into any object or creature! — excepting a creature of demigod-level (or higher) power — and may continue to transform into other forms for the duration of the spell. Once changed into an object or creature, the caster maintains his or her current hit points and mind as a magic-user, but otherwise assumes all of the abilities of the new form (excepting those dependent on intelligence).

CIX.

Abjuration.

à Durmandral lies in silence deeper than earth's own sleep—writes T'lla Three Locks in her voluminous Manual of Abjuration—Those who guard, must also go unheard.

Temporal Stasis

Range: 10'

Duration: permanent (see below)

The caster halts time for 1 creature within range — who consequently ceases to age, breathe, eat, move, etc. The creature remains in this suspended animation permanently — or at least until released from stasis by a temporal flux (the reverse of the spell) or dispel magic casting.

Time Stop

Range: 10'

Duration: 2-16 rounds

The caster 'steps out of time' — essentially freezing time, from the caster's perspective, for everyone else within an area 30 ft. in diameter. The caster moves and acts freely, while others in the area of effect (including those entering it from outside) stay frozen 'between the seconds.' The spell ends if the caster leaves the area.

Wish

Range: unlimited

Duration: special

As with limited wish, the caster entreats a capricious entity — at best indifferent to our well-being, but likely displeased by its momentary servitude — to reshape reality. Unlike the lesser entity invoked by limited wish, this greater eldritch power will — and can — effectuate major changes to reality, such as: duplicating the effect of another spell, returning to life a dead person or creature, transporting (i.e., plane shifting) the caster and allies (or another target) out of danger or to any location in existence, or performing another astonishing wonder — with the more powerful wishes (as adjudicated by the Referee), temporarily draining the caster's Strength by -4 points (to be restored after 2-8 days of full rest).

As with limited wish, this capricious entity may look for ways to trip up the caster with an overly literal interpretation (or outright misinterpretation) of the request. An incompetent, petty, or unreasonable petitioner may push this entity's capriciousness to malevolence (and the Referee may adjudicate such moods with reaction or Charisma checks, as needed).

Though a wish may curse a family, village, or other group — or a notable figure — with generational or long-lasting devastation, blight, sorrow, or tragedy, etc., using it for such an act may (likely) cause cosmic rebalancing and eventual reprisal.

Wizard's Monstrous Hand

Range: 120'

Duration: 1 round per level

The caster evokes (and commands) a hand-shaped monstrosity having the size and strength of a frost giant, and the mobility of a giant spider (capable of scaling sheer surfaces). The caster may command the monstrous hand to act as a protective barrier (or partial cover for ranged attackers, etc.), or to attack by crushing or punching — or by grappling or shoving (which it attempts without penalty). For the purpose of bending bars, lifting a gate, or forcing open a door, etc., the monstrous hand acts with the STR of a frost giant (adding a +5 bonus to its 2-in-6 chance).

The monstrous hand dematerializes if it loses all of its hit points (or when the spell reaches its natural duration). A caster (likely of Chaos) may make the duration of a monstrous hand permanent by sacrificing to it 1 point of his or her CON (& call this variant of the spell hand of Tartarus).

MONSTROUS HANDS: AC 9 [12], HD 9+18* (or hit points equal to those of its caster at full health), MV 120' (40'), #AT 1 × 4d6, PSI: Nil, THACO 11 [+8], Save F10: D6 W7 P8 B8 S10, ML 12, AL Neutral (TN), XP 1,600, NA 1 (1), TT Nil

- The monstrous hand suffers no effect from charm, sleep, or hold spells, nor from gases, poisons, or cold-based attacks. Additionally, it has a 40% chance of resisting a spell effect.

Hedge Mages

Hedge mage: An itinerant peddler and (on 1d6): 1-3. conjurer, 4. magician, 5. enchanter or enchantress, or 6. warlock or witch; or (1-in-36): 1-3. sorcerer or sorceress, 4-5. necromancer, or 6. wizard (or fae, fiend, or other monster, etc.).

Carries treasure as a trader, along with: common goods (rolled from a general list of weapons, armor, & equipment); a magic item from any of the magic subtables (rolled once for each subtable, with a chance equal to the mage's level ×5); & also regional magic items. Prices magic items at ×3 to ×10 (or more) production cost. (See issue 2 for black market items.)

REGIONAL MAGIC ITEMS

Merely a few items currently circulating.

1. Broom of flying [9,000 gp]: Sloppily repaired with glue & twine (6 flights)
2. Dueling wand [5,000 gp]: Battle-worn & dragon-scorched (see 'Dueling Wands')
- 3-4. Jack fixit [500 gp]: Potion of healing
5. Scroll [1,500 gp]: Three 1st-level spells
6. Roget's treasure map [5,000 gp]: Stained with a bit of the violet worm, leads (allegedly) to the location of 1 magic item

[Price in brackets = magic item's production cost. Increase ×3, or up to ×10 (or even higher), if the seller has a negative reaction to the buyer. Discount one-fifth if the buyer agrees to a quest on behalf of the seller (for the recovery of a rare component or equivalent treasure, and so on).]
